

AUSTIN + MERGOLD

June 2009

SURAL™ Walls

SURAL™ is contemplation on the state of building. For some time now we found ourselves having to contend with “local” vernacular typologies – such as bank barns, farm houses, grain dryers, scare crows and vast quantities of vinyl siding – and the local long-established tradition of developer construction that is founded on very pragmatic and rigid approach to built form. There the aesthetics is traditionally a side effect, in the service of the mysterious Curb Appeal®. Recognizing the power of the vernacular, we had attempted to rethink the local M.O. of building. The result – SURAL™ – is a confluence of rural, urban, sub- and semi-urban conditions that coexist, cross-pollinate and collide, often resulting in truly surreal situations.

SURAL™ reuses existing local practices, techniques and “old” technology.

SURAL™ is an application of the “new” technology for the purposes of the repositioning, re-invigorating and reutilizing vast quantities of material & resources that have already been tapped and/or wasted but are no longer aesthetically or environmentally desirable.

SURAL™ aesthetic is derived from the local vernacular but shaped by globalization.

SURAL™ Wall is a flexible and adaptable system that can be installed in a variety of settings, and, to utilize the classification of suburban housing, it can be attached, semi-detached and freestanding. Incidentally, it is also constructed out of the materials normally used in suburban building type – plywood and vinyl siding. Those decidedly unglamorous materials are explored in the SURAL™ Walls using the latest advances in fabrication technology (CNC milling) and innovative lighting to reveal their inner beauty and to problematize the nature of suburban development. SURAL™ Walls are the result of love/hate relationship that has been ensuing between suburbia and its residents.

SURAL™ Wall II is currently on view at Pentimenti Gallery in Philadelphia. www.pentimenti.com

SURAL™ Wall II

For more information see www.austin-mergold.com/work\_SuralWall2.html